I think we need to keep the pressure on. I liked the way our basic message= =20
was evolving over the course of last week. As you pointed out, the Japanes= e=20
utilities view us as just another annoying US company who is going to come= =20
in, bang its head against the wall for a few months and then leave. We nee= d=20
to continue to reinforce the message that not only are we not going away, w= e=20
are starting other businesses here to keep us going while we continue to=20 agitate for reform in the electricity sector.

To date, reports on Enron's role in California have been limited to a repri= nt=20
of a Sacramento Bee article appearing in the Denki Shimbun - a limited=20 circulation publication sponsored by the Japanese utilities. Last Friday Mr=

=20

Ohta, President of Chubu Electric and Chairman of the Federation of Electric Power Companies, made some uninformed comments at a regular energy press club briefing about Enron's commitment to its Californian customers . Ohta will be retiring from both positions in two weeks.=20

In the past both Chubu Electric and the Federation of Electric Power Companies have distanced themselves from Mr Ohta's public comments which are generally considered to be ultra conservative and unsupported by facts. As a result, we have tended to ignore his comments. However, on this occasion I think we need to set the record straight on Enron's role in California. I would welcome your thoughts on whether we should let the comments pass or respond.

Over the past few months we have received various statements from Houston

(for both internal and external consumption) explaining Enron's role in California. Most recently (May 10) we received from Peggy Mahoney (via Vance) an EES statement dated 1 February entitled "Media Statement about EES Resourcing California Customers". It would be helpful if there is a comprehensive statement that has recently been put together that we could distribute here. If not, we can put something together here tomorrow and email it across to you for approval, with the aim of getting something out Wednesday.

As an aside, we had a record 3,766 visitors to the EJ website last Friday, the day the Brattle paper appeared on the website.

kind regards =20
