Looks fine as far as it goes ... but don't we want to explain how this fits in to our strategy? Is it just another platform for us to bring our products and prices to the market? We have said with respect to EOL that the transaction is the goal not the platform. Do we want to position this the same way? Examples of other press releases include our extension of pricing on EOL to the two other platforms (including Houston Street) which we did a couple of months ago.

Subject: Envera Release

Enron Global Markets (EGM) has entered into a cooperative agreement with Envera, a B2B network for the chemical and petrochemical industry. As part of this agreement EGM will receive an equity interest in Envera. The contract allows Envera to issue a press release, subject to our approval. Attached for your review and comment is the proposed release. This release has been heavily scrubbed. It is significantly less exposure than in their initial proposals. Your early approval would be appreciated.
